What are command verbs

A command verb, also known as an imperative verb, is a verb that is used to give a command or instruction. It is a verb form that directs someone to perform a specific action.

All questions in an ABMA Education examination will contain a command verb. These command verbs will direct you on how to answer the question.

You will notice the command verbs fall under categories and in some instances a command verb may fall under more than one category. All of our learning outcomes have been developed using Bloom's Taxonomy and as such learners are required to either:

- 'Analyse',
- 'Apply', or
- 'Evaluate'.

It is important that you familiarise yourself with the command verbs and categories they may fall under as this should help determine what is being asked of you within an examination question.

Below are the command verbs which may appear within an examination.
